HERRON WILL CASE YESTERDAY STRICKEN FROM THE DOCKET.

No Bond Was Filed-An Appeal in Supreme Court-The Rooker Murder Trial.

The suit to set aside the will of the late John Herron, which bequeathed a large sum of money to the Indianapolis Art Association, was yesterday thrown out of the Circuit Court, where it was filed six months at various points. ago. The action to break the will was begun by Emma Harrison and others, relatives of Mr. Herron. About six weeks ago The executor of the Herron estate demurred to the petition and Judge Brown heard a lengthy argument on the question. He decided against the plaintiffs, however, and cided against the plaintiffs against the plaintiff against th gave them thirty days in which to file the usual bond. At the same time he warned Chicago, has about the same record of Harthe plaintiffs' counsel that the case would be stricken from the docket if at the expiration of the thirty days bond had not been filed. The plaintiffs having appealed from the decision to the Supreme Court, did ried him against their wishes. The Knights of Maccabees Refused to Pay His Policy. Sarah Powell began an action yesterday against the Supreme Tent of the Knights of Maccabees of the World to recover the amount of a policy held by her husband, Thomas H. Powell, at his death, Aug. 18, 1895. The plaintiff shows that satisfactory proof of death was made to the order, but liability was denied on the ground that the plaintiff's nusband had violated Section 142 of the laws of the order by engaging as principal in the sale of spirituous and malt liquors as a beverage. The plaintiff avers that for more than ten months after her husband was engaged in the sale of liquor the defendant and its agents continued to recognize him as a member of the order and continued to levy and collect from him assessments and dues up to the time of his death. COMBINATION SHOW THIS WEEK. Much Interest in the Trial of the public. The management has been agreeably surprised at the numerous entries, and it is now announced that about twenty of though these remarkably sagacious animals figured in history for nearly two hundred years, they are not common in this section of the country. Their presence, therefore, at the Tomlinson Hall exhibit, and the fact that they are to demonstrate the keenness of their scent and ability to do detective work, lends additional interest to them at this time. The bloodhound was common and much in use in England in 1600, but is now rare. Early in American history the dog was used for the pursuit and capture of slaves, an employment which rendered the name odious in the minds of many Aboiltionists. Many interesting stories are related of the sagacity and determination of the hounds in following a track upon which they had been set, even after great effort had been made to obliterate all scent or evidence of the course taken. Away back in 1796, just a century ago, these dogs were imported into Jamaica to be used in suppressing the Maroon insurrection, and many interesting facts are related of their extraordinary daring and faithfulness. This is the kind of hound that was employed in the South during slavery days, and it is the same kind that will be here this week. These animals are not necessarily ferocious, as one would think, but can be trained to pursue human beings and hold them as prisoners when caught without offering the But these canines are not the only attraction at the combination show. There will be all kinds of dogs, ferocious-looking animals and dogs as meek as lambs. There will be mastiffs and Scotch terriers, greyhounds and poodles, great Danes and St. Charles spaniels and every dog that can be classed under the head of toy dogs, last, but not least, of which is the broken-nosed pug, which, by the way, was introduced into England by the father of the present Duke time. The judges will begin scoring Tuesday morning, so that many of the prize winners will be known that night. Owing to the extremely cold weather, the express companies have agreed to provide warm quarters for birds which will arrive Sunday

SAME OLD INSTRUCTIONS.

Police Ordered to See that Liquor Laws Are Obeyed To-Day.

This morning Captain Quigley received written instructions from Superintendent Colbert to direct the patrolmen to pay attention to the saloons and see that the liquor laws are observed to-day. He also directed that the officers report all violain duty and have failed to obey the commands of their superior officers in the past two or three months or else it is tacitly understood the order is farcial, and not to be obeyed. It remains to be seen whether the law will be observed to-day and whether arrests will follow its violation.

Twenty-seven of these, or 75 per cent., have been females.

Looking forward the prophetic mind can necessitate the formation of a protective association. A prophetic mind can see the positions of importance and trust all occupied by women, including jobs on the police force. The men can be seen filling inferior positions and serving as minions of the majority. Should the proporton continue all over the country the women at a later day can elect their own officers and run the government to suit them-

Should the proportion continue during this year alone, about 1,500 girls and 500 boys will be born. In ten years' time there will be recorded the birth of 15,000 girls and 5,000 boys, and a century from now the record will show the number of girls born between this time and then as 1,500,000 and the boys as 500,000. Of course, all of the children born in the meanwhile will not be living then, but the figures illustrate what may be expected and show the proportion of increase. The new year has started bad for the men and the outlook is gloomy.

MAY BE AN EXTRA SESSION.

Depends on Apportionment Decision by the Supreme Court.

According to Charles E. Shively, State Senator from Wayne county, the possibility of an extra session of the Legislature is not too remote to be considered. He expressed it as his opinion yesterday that the Supreme Court should declare the apportionment law of 1895 unconstitutional, it would also declare the law of 1893 unconstitutional. This would leave the State without an apportionment of any kind for legislative purposes, and the only thing that could be done would be to call an extra session of the Legislature to make provision for the election of new Representatives.

A NOTED DOCTOR DEAD.

His Patients Included Kings, Queens and Many Famous Statesmen. London Daily News. Dr. Fauvel, who recently died at Paris, had the greatest practice, perhaps, in the world of any doctor in his special branchthe treatment of throat disease. It cannot be said that he was mercenary. Specialists can ask what fees they like. Fauvel's fee for looking at a throat in his own consult-ing room was 50f. He founded thirty years ago an infirmary, where he treated poor people for nothing. Innumerable were the singers and public speakers whose voices he saved. Among his patients were Gambetta, Queen Isabella, the Emperor of Brazil, the King of Roumania, Thiers (who had an extremely delicate throat), the Emperor Napoleon, the Princess Clotilde, the Comte de Paris, and the late Empress of Russia. Dr. Evans had not mere first-class decorations or jeweled souvenirs sent by royal and imperial clients. His parties were like those of the late M. Cremieux, who was advocate for most of the great singers and actors, and had them as friends to his solrees to entertain his other guests. Fauvel first studied at the Hotel Dieu. where his father, a doctor who migrated from Amiens, was head of the sanitary service. He then placed himself under Velpeau at La Charite, where he was engaged as house student. Appointed to look into the claims of the quack Vries, known as the "Black Doctor," Fauvel was very nearly being a witness for the Paris correspondent of the Daily News in an action for libel the "Black Doctor" began in Paris. and threatened to take it to London. the suit was dropped in consequence of the publicly expressed opinion of Velpeau, who said that Vries deserved the utmost penalty the law meted to homicidal imposters. Vries was greatly patronized by the imperial court, and administered his quack medicine to a sister of the Empress, to the utter ruin of her health. His great claim was to cure cancer. It was found that his treatment was violently mercurial, and that it drove the cancerous poison into the internal organs. Velpeau was too busy to show up all that had been observed of Vries's practice. He deputed Fauvel to write about it, and instructed him to be merciless. As the dean of the faculty, Bloodhounds.

The officers of the alumnae association of the alumnae, to be held at the school have considerable interest on the part of the school after the holicidays. This meeting, called with the approval of Mrs. Sewall, is in honor of Mr. Sewall, whose premature loss the school and of the faculty, Tardieu was instructed from the Tuileries, where he was in favor, to do what he could for the "Black Doctor."

Party feeling heated the affair. Every one opposed to the empire bought Fauvel's brochure, which almost brought him a fortune. He was astonished to find himself the most talked of man in Paris. Immediately, and he was recast. practice. His thesis on the use of the aryngoscope and a treatise that soon followed it on throat diseases, gave him further eminence. He soon specialized his practice, but during the siege he served as surgeon major of a legion of National Guards. During the illness of the Emperor Frederick, Fauvel was applied to to give his opinion on a written diagnosis of the Emperor's throat. He said he must see the throat himself. The Empress Augusta wished him to be sent for, but she was

New York Evening Sun.

In common with many people Mrs. Jus-tina Listner, of 226 East Fifty-sixth street, was wont to appeal to her little son's sense of fear as a punishment, or as an incentive to compel obedience. Her favorite ogre was a "nigger under the bed," who vould, as the youngster believed, eat bad Yesterday forenoon the mother threatened her little son Andrew with the nigger for some childish dereliction. But the youngster hought his years warranted him in exploding the nigger ruse. So he boldly marched into the bedroom, dropped upon his knees and peered under the bed. The youngster fell over in fright. Then he scrambled to his feet and ran to his mother, stammering

"Dere is a nigger dere, Dere is a nigger re." he finally exclaimed. dere," he finally exclaimed.

The lad's appearance convinced Mrs. Listner that he had seen something, and she hastened into the sleeping room. Sure enough, there was "a nigger:" he was just crawling out from under the bed. Miss Listreawling out from under the bed. Miss List-ner gave chase, shouting "Stop thief." Detectives Murphy and Quinlan, of the East Fifty-first-street station, chased him to a hayloft over the John Kress Brewing Company's stables, where he was caught. The negro said he was John Brown, of 329 The negro said he was John Brown, of 329
East Ninety-seventh street. He said he entered the house, finding the ocor open, at 4 in the morning, to get some sleep. He pulled a rabbit foot from his pocket and said: "I only put that there to-day, and this is the luck it has brought me." Brown was taken to headquarters, but was not recognized.

Magistrate Mott committed him in 31,000
